HONGKONG, DECEMBER 19TH, 1871.

WE give elsewhere an article from the Times, tra. together with a reply from Mr. H. N. LAY, which are most significant as illustrating the degree to which the false principles which have of late been enunciated are being carried. It seems almost impossible to believe that in adopting such views as those in the article any other idea could be entertained than that of directly bringing about a men serving on the jury: Mesers, W. G. Humserious difficulty in China. We are asked phreys, E. Andrews, F. J. B. Blackbend, C. to abandon the Missionary clauses in the Treaty, because the Chinese Government is kind enough to warn us that if we do not so. more difficulties like the Tientsin Massacre will occur. The position is: China says to Great Britain: "Look here, we have murdered in the most barbarous way twenty-one French subjects, one of whom was a Consul, and twelve of whom were poor helpless women. Think yourself lucky you have not been served in the same way; but if you do not and wounding with intent to do grievous bodily withdraw the Missionary clauses from your harm, it was open to the jury to find them Treaty, you will be treated in the same manner, if not worse." And after this, the Times | were indicted for the two offences of wound rays. "our policy is clear"-remove the Missionary clauses. tecting the missionaries as such to be erused from the Treaty, we should still bave the right to guard their lives and property as those of British subjects, and it is hardly fair to ask the Chinese for more than this. We are of opinion, therefore, that this clause of the Tecaty should be abandoned, and, though concessions are of little avail to conciliate the unreasoning animosities of Asiatics, we should place curselves in a better position for demanding redress in ones of future outrages, by doing full justice now. It would, however, he absolutely essential to obtain the co-operation of France in this matter, for unless the French Government ceases to extend special favour to the missions at the same time that we do, we shall gain little or nothing in the way of security or a clear conscience. If tho Roman Catholic missions pursue their meddlesome intrigues, riots which the Chinese Government now predict or threaten will break out, and a Chinese mob, once roused, will not trouble itself to make a distinction between Catholic and Protestunts, between missionaries and merobants. The restraint which is placed by the Peking Ministry on the populace in the ports is likely only to what the rage of the mob, and in the meantime the Chinese armaments are growing to gigantic proportions. At any time it may anit the Government to let go the reins and loose the people on the foreignere; or Prince Kung's powers of operation may fail. We do not wish to take an alarmist tone, but we should warm the country that our relations with China may at any moment bring us to the verge of war. The difficulties may be evaded by a skilful policy, but it would be rash to assume that a resort to a ruder arbitrament may not

The following letter has appeared in the above paper on this subject :-

Sir, Allow me' to point out a misapprehension on the subject of the Chinese Treaty. There is no clause in that Treaty protecting the missionaries as such. They are simply outitled to the same protection as all other foreigners, and in their protest against the late Chinese Circular on Missions they strongly object to being separated from the rest of the foreign community, and placed under social restrictions. The misapprehension has arisen from the fact that there is a clause which provides that toleration shull be extended towards natives who may profess or teach Christainity. The clauses reads thus :- The doctrine of Jesus (Protestant) and the doctrine of the Lord of Heaven (Roman Catholic) teach the practice of virtue and the treatment of others as ourselves; henceforth all tenetiers and professors of it shall be protected." That this does not refer to foreign teachers is plain, because if this clause were cancelled they would have the same protection as before namely, that enjoyed by all foreignera; but in ao far as it applies to Chinese Obristians it is to be boped that Great Britain will never not so ignoble a part as to withdraw MOh scope and practical service this Work stands unrivalled. All the new word which the Ohinese have of late years been compelled to coin to express the numerous objects in machinery, photography, telegraphy, and in foreign relations has imposed upon them, are here given in coleran. Each and every word is fully illustrated and explained, forming exercises for students of a most instructive nature. Both the Court and Punti pronunctations are given, the accents being ourefully marked on the best principle hitkerto attained." The typography displays the success of an attempt to make the Chinese and English type correspond n the ease of body; thereby effecting a vast oconomy of space, achieving a clearness not previously attained, and dispensing with those wast margins and vacant spaces which have heretofore characterized Chinese publications. The scope of the work is so great, and its utilitarian purposes so complete, that a reference to its pages enables a person who understands English to communicate effectively ing to Dear & Co., and situate on the with natives who understand nothing but Chi.
